

Prices: opsi extensions in co-funding projects

opsi is open source and free of license fees.

Nevertheless the development of new opsi modules is expensive. Thus uib created the co-financing process as an instrument to finance the open source development. The following modules are developed as co-funding projects. That means, that these extensions are only available for those customers who pay a contribution to the project costs.

As soon as the development of a co-funding project is refinanced, the component becomes part of the free opsi distribution and can be used free of charge. It will be open source then (as long as not prevented by technical reasons)

opsi-modules
Nagios Connector	Monitoring of opsi-server functionality, opsi rollouts, opsi clients
Lizenzmanagement	Management of software licenses
Local Image / VHD Reset	Quick client restore of student computers
MySQL-Backend	Increases performance on large installation
WAN Erweiterung	This extension enables to save bandwidth on download for installation data per https/WebDAV and stores the data locally – The module MySQL-Backend is required
Linux Agent	Client and configuration management for Linux systems. Permanent use of the opsi-linux-client-agent
Scalability 1	Increases performance by using multiple processes
UEFI Support	Support of UEFI boot and GPT partition tables
WIM-Capture	Capture of Windows installation incl. Hotfixes, software and configuration
User-Roles	The client visibility can be configured specifically per depot
Directory Connector	Transfer of client data from an LDAP-enabled directory service (i.e. Active Directory or Samba 4) to opsi
Secureboot	Through Secureboot it is possible to ensure that only signed operating systems are started when a computer is booted. The module UEFI Support is required

There is no dependency between the opsi extensions, except the WAN-extension, that has to be used together with the MySQL-Backend.

Buying an opsi module doesn't include the support for this module. Some modules require extensive configuration. We support you as part of your opsi support contract or with a two-hour installation and configuration support (see specification).

We also offer the opsi modules in combination with support contracts and update subscriptions in annual payment methods. Please ask if you are interested in an offer. The annual fee depends on the number of opsi clients.

The general terms and conditions of uib gmbh are to be applied. Please see the specification. All prices are exclusive VAT and apply per end customer.
